About This Program

This conference schedule has been loosely divided into two event types: speakers and sessions. The latter category includes all panels, including featured panels and author-meets-critic events. In an attempt to limit scheduling conflicts, sessions do not overlap with featured speakers.

Featured speakers are all listed in the at-a-glance calendar.

There are ten time slots for sessions during the conference, as indicated on the at-a-glance calendar. Since there are multiple sessions scheduled into each time slot, each session has been identified with a letter and a number. The letter corresponds to the network organizing the session and is paired with a number to create a unique identifier to help you locate the session in the program. Featured Panels are listed as FP, Mini-Conference Themes as TH, and Special Mini-Conference Themes as STH.

To find out where and when a given participant is presenting, you can look at the participant list at the back of this program. Next to his or her name, you will find the panels in which he or she is presenting, as well as the times of those panels. For example: Jane Smith, A13, Monday 1:30. Once you have this information, you can go to the main schedule and look for the A-13 panel on Friday at 8:30.

The main schedule provides a detailed list of sessions (titles, locations, participants, etc.) in chronological order. To help you navigate it more quickly, a list of sessions organized by network appears just before it in this program.

The PDF version of this program is available on the SASE website www.sase.org

Please note that rooms at the via Conservatorio site are equipped with both projectors and computers, though the rooms at the via Festa del Perdono site are not equipped with computers, and so you must bring your own computer and standard VGA adaptor if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation.

A Word from SASE President Patrick Le Galès

Benvenuti a tutti to the Università degli Studi di Milano for SASE’s 25th Annual Meeting!

This year, SASE marks the first quarter century of its existence with a great program put together by a program committee that has worked hard to strike the right balance between the intimate intellectual atmosphere and the vibrant openness that SASE members have enjoyed for so many years. As our program goes to press, we are expecting, as planned, about 800 participants from several dozen countries, all of whom will be contributing to a wide-ranging and thought-provoking discussion about the different aspects of the economy that concerns SASE and about this year’s theme, States in Crisis. The different forms of the state’s restructuring and economic fate in Asia, the Americas or Europe in relation to the crisis and recovery, at least in some part of the world, is a central feature for SASE. The enduring crisis in Europe, increasing inequalities, unemployment and lack of growth, hard austerity cuts, migrations, consequences of climate change, tax evasion, uncertainties about the Euro, and political troubles are all present in Italy and will be addressed in panels and conferences in comparative terms.

Italy has a formidable intellectual tradition in economic sociology, political economy, and community studies, which has influenced research all over the world. Take for instance industrial districts, knowledge capitalism, welfare and poverty, the social basis of the economy, organizations, migration networks, mafias, or corruption. This meeting is also an opportunity to pay tribute to the group of formidable scholars who have led the way, counting, among others: Alessandro Pizzorno, Massimo Paci, Marino Regini, Chiara Saraceno, Arnaldo Bagnasco, Alberto Martinelli, Emilio Reyneri, Fortunata Piselli, Enzo Mingione, Ida Regalia, Diego Gambetta, Maurizio Ferrera, Angelo Pichierri, minister Carlo Trigilia, economists such as Giacomo Becattini, Michele Salvati, Patrizio Bianchi, Gianfranco Viesti, Fabrizio Barca, and Daniele Cecchi, not to mention the dynamic younger generation. In addition to our journal Socio-Economic Review, Stato e Mercato has been one of the leading intellectual forums in socio-economics and various disciplines. SASE’s intellectual agenda and developments owe much to this tradition of research.

This year’s conference has been made possible thanks to the hard work and commitment of many. First, to Marino Regini and the Università degli Studi di Milano, Dipartimento di Scienze Sociali e Politiche (SPS), who have accepted to host our meeting. Second I want to thank our program chairs, Roberto Pedersini from Milan and Isabela Mares from Columbia University, who contributed so much to making sure that the content of the program you are holding was as rich and compelling as possible. Their work was made possible thanks to our excellent local organizing committee, chaired by Marino Regini and Roberto Pedersini: Gabriele Ballarino, Daniele Cecchi, Maurizio
Ferrera, Massimo Florio, Ida Regalia, and Renata Semenza. SASE is extremely grateful to the Università degli Studi di Milano for their generous sponsorship and splendid hospitality in this exceptional setting, as well as to Compagnia di San Paolo and Fondazione Cariplo for their outstanding support.

Deep thanks are also due to the network and mini-conference organizers, who, year after year, take on the tremendous task of organizing the sessions that you are about to enjoy. I also want to thank the members of the Executive Council and various committees, including the awards and presidential search committees, and many others who have contributed to the success of this conference – we all owe a debt of gratitude to the colleagues who take time from their busy schedules to make sure this conference and this organization are the best they can be.

Last but not least, I wish to thank Martha Zuber, SASE’s Executive Director. In addition to managing the “nuts and bolts” in the SASE headquarters, Martha brings matchless enthusiasm, humor, energy, and creativity to her work, and she is a tremendous asset to our organization. She is supported by her assistants Jacob Bromberg, Patricia Zraidi, and Miranda Richmond Mouillot, as well as Jeremy Zuber, and Romain Dortier who manage the website. I would like to thank them all for their hard work this past year. We elect a new president at SASE every year but in fact past presidents work closely with new ones and I want to thank my predecessors Mari Sako and Jonathan Zeitlin for constant ideas and support.

It is my great pleasure to welcome all SASE participants, both longtime attendees and newcomers, and to wish you all a productive and stimulating conference and an enjoyable stay in the great city of Milan.
Reflections from Past SASE Presidents

Amitai Etzioni, SASE Founder and President from 1988-1990

SASE was conceived by accident. When my book, The Moral Dimension: Toward a New Economics, was off to the printers, the Harvard Business School, where I was teaching at the time, gave me a small grant – it was to bring together colleagues to discuss the book. A surprisingly number agreed to come, not because of the book, but because of the topic. They shared the sense that the time had come for an economics not based on neoclassical assumptions, but on socio-economic ones. Others, from out of town who were not formally invited, asked if they could participate. And the word got around in a region, which has quite a few fine universities. In the end, about 250 people joined in the discussions. We had the sense that the issue at hand deserved more than one meeting, and SASE was founded.

For its first three years, SASE was run out of my office, by my small staff, and from a very small budget I had. When David Coughlin agreed to move the SASE “headquarters” to his office, he openly asked me if I was “willing to let go,” to allow SASE to develop in different directions than I had envisioned. Truth to be told, I was ambivalent. On the one hand, I held – and do hold – that SASE should be dedicated to developing a new economic theory and policies. Indeed, the terrible pain inflicted on hundred of millions of people over the last years, who have lost their jobs, homes, and life’s savings, in my judgment, is due, to a significant extent, to the fact that a sounder economics has not been developed. However, I also realized that for SASE to grow, it would have to find its own legs. It surely did.

Among some of my favorite memories is the meeting in Geneva, conducted with the Communitarian Network. A key address was to be delivered by a leader of the German Social Democrats, Rudolf Scharping. However, he fell off his bike (really, not just as an excuse for not showing up). Luckily, Hans Joas agreed to reach his speech. It was very well received (and I made a new friend in Hans). In the same meeting, the group went for a trip on a cocktail boat on the lake. Kurt Biendorff, the governor of Lower Saxony and a leading German conservative politician, was holding court with a large number of young people sitting at his feet and listening to his socio-economic ideas, between puffs of smoke from his pipe.

There are many SASE network organizers, program officers, elected officials, and a few executive sectaries to whom SASE (and I) owe a great deal. SASE, after all, is a voluntary organization, and not one that ranks first in most people’s professional interests. It takes, hence, a measure of dedication to keep it running, and to actively participate in keeping it going and growing. Some stand out for me. I believe SASE is especially indebted to Martha Zuber and Mary Grossman, who have served as its executive directors and did an outstanding job. I am not sure SASE would have survived, and am very sure it would not have done as well, without them.

Wolfgang Streeck (and his wife Silvia) and Edward W Lehman were my students at Columbia University two generations ago. One of the joys of SASE, for me, was to see them at annual meetings and learn about their very substantial contributions to this organization. Nancy DiTomaso is one of the old timers who stayed with us all these years. There are many others, who come year in year out, without whom there would be no SASE. Indeed, for the first years, the organization had a near death experience every year, as the budget would run out and for it to keep going, a decent attendance for the next meeting was necessary. I understand that it is now on much stronger footing.

My hourglass has almost run out. I learned that it is not possible, nor necessary, for all or even most the members of SASE to follow one agenda. I still hope that more will dedicate more of their time and energy to find an economics that will serve better the people of the world than the prevailing economics does.

Amitai Etzioni June 1, 2013
Jane Mansbridge, SASE President from 1992-1993

I was president of SASE in 1992-1993, in the heady early days when it was still a precocious, upstart organization trying to impress upon mainstream academia the importance of a view of economics that took into account psychological, social, political, ethical, institutional, and other forms of social behavior. I had just published, in 1990, the volume Beyond Self-Interest, in which I asked several authors to summarize their books, each of which demonstrated the effects of non-self-interested behavior in arenas ranging from international relations to psychology, economics, and evolutionary biology. I loved SASE then and love it still for its broad reach, its commitment to interdisciplinarity, and its grounding in real-world problems. It embodies the best in academia: a genuine dedication to understanding the human condition and a warm sense of colleagueship in that search. I cannot attend this year, as my duties as president of the American Political Science Association preclude it, but I hope that I am carrying on its traditions in my Presidential Task Force on Negotiating Agreement in Politics, which hopes to place negotiation on the agenda of political science and has working groups from the fields of cognitive psychology and behavioral economics, the US Congress, the EU and comparative government, international relations, and normative democratic theory. I wish I could join you; I would love to be there. Warmest wishes for a magnificent twenty-fifth anniversary!

William Frederick, SASE President from 1993-1994

SASE originated in the fertile mind of Amitai Etzioni during his two-year stint as a visiting faculty member at the Harvard Business School in the late 1980s. Almost instantly, SASE caught on like wildfire among an astonishing range of high-profile scholars in the US and abroad. Personally, I was totally thrilled when upon appealing to Amitai for a place on the first SASE program in 1989, he granted me “the one remaining spot.” The list of luminaries attending that first conference is far too long to reproduce here but included George Lodge, Alfred Chandler, Chris Argyris, Joseph Badaracco, Joseph Bower, Richard Sweder, Lee Preston, Edwin Epstein, Richard Swedberg, Bryan Barry, Richard Rose, Amartya Sen, Albert Hirschman, Neil Smelser, Henry Mintzberg, Nancy DiTomaso, Robert Reich, Paul Lawrence, Rosabeth Kanter, Michael Useem, plus many others of equal prominence. In the early years to follow, SASE membership spread throughout the world – representing 16 non-US nations in its second year – and attracted an amazing range of socio-economic viewpoints on theory, practice, and policy. Obviously, Amitai had started something that struck home with a diverse scholarly community worldwide.

I was elected SASE President for the 1993-94 year, following the earlier terms of Etzioni as Founding President, Daniel Yankelovich, David Sears, and Jane Mansbridge. For the 1994 SASE conference in Paris, more than 500 participants were involved, representing 31 nations from around the world. At the Paris conference, I asked SASE members to sign on to a statement identifying public-policy principles related to the economic transition in central and eastern Europe following the breakup of the Soviet Union. Coauthored with Kenneth Hunter of the University of Maryland, our 4-page declaration was titled “JOINING HANDS: A Declaration of Socio-Economic Principles to Guide Economic Transition Policies and Programs.” It was endorsed by 60 leading SASE members. Subsequently, the Declaration was sent to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, the President of the European Commission, UN member-representatives of 33 nations, the President of the UN Association of the USA, the US Secretary of State, and US Congressional leaders. The Declaration was an attempt to exert direct influence on public policy regarding socio-economic issues and problems. I have copies of the Declaration and the accompanying letters urging support of its socio-economic principles.
One final very important note: Throughout the early years of SASE’s founding and getting organized, Richard Coughlin of the University of New Mexico served as the organization’s Executive Director. Without Coughlin’s leadership and executive skills, SASE might well have stumbled into oblivion. Today’s members should be grateful for Richard Coughlin’s many contributions in those early years.

Nancy DiTomaso, SASE President from 1994-1995

My youngest daughter attended the first SASE meeting with me when she was two months old. The meeting was held at Harvard Business School, and over the two day meeting, I spent $400 on childcare in order to be there and participate. I remember at the time thinking that it was well worth it. When the same daughter was 12, she went with me to the meetings in Amsterdam, with side trips to Freiburg, Germany, and Paris. It provided an important bonding experience before the teenage years that were soon upon us.

In the early years of SASE, Amitai Etzioni used his extensive networks and organizational skills to create an excitement about the interdisciplinary and international organization that began to draw people from all over the U.S. and Europe, and increasingly from other parts of the world. In addition to places within the U.S., including Boston, Washington, D.C., Irvine (CA), New York, Madison, Minneapolis, and Philadelphia (some multiple times), meetings were held at many non-U.S. locations, including Stockholm, Paris, Geneva, Montreal, Vienna, London, Amsterdam, Aix en Provence, Budapest, Trier, Copenhagen, San Jose (Costa Rica), Madrid, and now Milan.

In addition to the opportunity to travel to wonderful locations, SASE was special from the beginning because of the people it drew as keynote speakers, fellows, and honored guests, including among many others Alfred Chandler, Mary Douglas, James Kenneth Galbraith, Rosabeth Kanter, Marvin Olson, Amartya Sen, Herbert Simon, Larry Summers, Cass Sustein, and Lester Thurow.

I valued the opportunity to attend SASE meetings and to participate because there was no other professional organization of which I was a part that drew so widely across the social and behavioral sciences, that provided the chance to stretch intellectually, and that forced thinking about things in a cross-disciplinary fashion. There were also few other conferences that drew people from so many countries to talk about the critical and cutting-edge ideas emerging from socio-economics at a time when the world was being transformed. I never attended a SASE conference without meeting new people with whom I would not otherwise have had an opportunity to come into contact and without hearing from scholars in fields outside my own whose insights and levels of accomplishment are noteworthy. My association with SASE over the years has provided the opportunity to grow and learn in ways that would not be possible if I participated only narrowly within my own discipline. SASE provides the opportunity for scholars to extend their thinking and expand their horizons as we confront an increasingly challenging set of social, political, and economic issues that require innovative and interdisciplinary ways of thinking.

Rogers Hollingsworth, SASE President from 1996-1997

I especially want to share some of the history of SASE. When I was president, SASE had no money, there was no Executive Director, and there was no office. Professor Richard Coughlin of the University of New Mexico did in his spare time help to coordinate registration affairs. We had no networks, nor any other means of organizing sessions for our meetings. We were completely dependent on registration fees from those attending and to universities who hosted the meetings to contribute toward costs. This usually meant paying for rooms where sessions could be held. I remember that in one of our first meetings SASE encountered a deficit. It was pretty awful. Fortunately, Jerry Hage (the president who succeeded me) and I worked together to get Loyola University in Baltimore to provide an office, and Mary Grossman agreed to become the Executive Director. These were difficult times for all concerned. It is too bad there is no history of SASE. Of course, we should all remember that it was Amitai Etzioni who founded SASE, and without his enormous energy there would be no SASE today.

Jerald Hage, SASE President from 1997-1998

Rogers Hollingsworth mentioned his efforts involving me. We would spend a lot of time on the phone brainstorming. I actually enjoyed it. My contributions as President consisted of first insisting that SASE develop a solid base in Europe so that there was a diversity of thought and second creating networks to be directed by two persons. I was able to talk Axel van de Berg in being the co-director along with an economist of the SASE theory network. I am sorry that this has not continued and I think it should be restarted.

Marino Regini, SASE President from 2001-2002

At any new SASE conference I go back in time with my mind and try to decide which was the one I enjoyed the most – a difficult choice indeed.

It may have been the first one I attended (Vienna 1998), which had the special flavor of matching faces with names of people I had been intensively emailing for a year. In fact, the year before Rogers Hollingsworth had asked me to be co-chair together with Robin Stryker. I accepted and for a whole year I did invite people whom I didn’t know to participate, organized panels, proposed new Research Networks. Then I finally saw them (including Robin, with whom I had exchanged tons of emails without having ever seen her) and suddenly SASE became real: not just a series of panels, names, and titles, but a community of people soon to become friends.

Or it may have been the conference in which I had to deliver my presidential address (Minneapolis 2002). I was of course excited about it, but even more by the extremely friendly and cozy atmosphere at the University of Minnesota. Rather few people attended the conference (not good for SASE finances), but we enjoyed a wonderful welcome by the local organizers and a family atmosphere.

Or perhaps was it the one in 2006? I believe it was in Trier, but am not completely sure as I saw nothing of the city. In fact, I spent all my time between the conference site and my hotel. Why, was I sick? No, I wanted to watch (together with 80% of the conference participants) the soccer World Cup... That year Italy won and that’s why I especially remember this conference.

But perhaps it was instead last year’s conference at MIT. I loved so much to be back in Cambridge, where I spent several months (at Harvard a long time ago, and later at MIT) and still have several dear friends.

Actually, on second thought, none of the above. The best SASE conference will certainly be the next one. Not because it will be in Milan, at my own University, and I helped organize it. But because the best SASE conference always is, and it always will be, the next one. SASE is the only association where I have a feeling of continuity and at the same time of growth. Old friends are always there, and yet every year I also get to know new interesting people. That’s why I look forward to my next SASE conferences, each of them obviously the best!
When David Marsden first asked me to become SASE’s President for the 2006 conference, I felt very honored but also slightly worried about the responsibilities involved. Some of the most onerous tasks of the President Elect are to choose the place where the conference is to be held and then, as President, to select the venue for the conference two years ahead. These tasks are not made any easier by the fact that SASE is rarely inundated with offers of conference venues from local organizers.

I considered myself very lucky to receive a generous offer of a conference site for my 2006 presidency from Dieter Sadowski, a labor economist at the University of Trier in Germany. Dieter was extremely cooperative and efficient about all local arrangements and made the first task an easy one. Being German-born, I was particularly delighted to have the conference in Germany for once. However, my choice of Trier was not met with general acclaim and attracted some very pessimistic forecasts about attendance, mainly to do with Trier’s relatively small size and somewhat remote position. However, pessimism about poor communications proved misplaced, and Trier’s small size was amply compensated for by its attractiveness as a very old Roman city on the Moselle river. Although the attendance figure did not establish a new record it was very adequate and brought SASE many new members from Germany. Academically, too, it was successful, with high profile and engaging plenary speakers such as Karin Knorr-Cetina and Michael Mann. Another pleasure of the conference was to award two of our long-standing and very eminent members – Wolfgang Streeck and Mario Regini – honorary memberships.

This was also the conference where we had to agree on a changing of the guard at the extremely important administrative level of SASE. The founding Executive Director Mary Grossman, after many years of devoted service, had announced her retirement as Director, and we were very lucky to be able to appoint Martha Zuber to the position. As Mary is American, and Martha resides in Paris this was initially viewed as very problematic by some members, but again worries proved unfounded, to say the least.

Another extremely difficult decision at the 2006 conference was the selection of the conference venue for 2008. We had only one firm offer at the time, namely from Costa Rica. As we had long talked about attracting more members from Latin America, it seemed to me and a number of other members of the Executive Council a very opportune offer. However, it took two meetings of the Council – a most unusual occurrence – to finally get the venue accepted. Needless to say, Costa Rica was not a flop and, despite its distance from Europe, attracted sufficient SASE members to break even. The moral of my tale is that what initially appeared to be slightly adventurous decisions to some members had very satisfactory outcomes in the end.

States in Crisis

For more than a century now, states have intervened strongly in the face of crises in capitalism to deal with their social and economic consequences. States invented new models of regulation (Keynesianism) to deal with capitalist contradictions, socialized the huge losses booked by banks and large firms, changed policy instruments to correct market failures, changed labor market regulations, or created new markets while supporting creative destruction. Crises are highly conducive to thinking about periods and varieties of capitalism, about regulation crises and dynamics, and about the role of the state; they also raise massive tensions and open the floor to political debates, which may call the legitimacy of the state into question and create political pressures.

The 2008 financial crisis and the ensuing recession demonstrate both the power and the vulnerability of the modern state. States were severely buffeted by the economic crisis, and most advanced democracies were forced to take dramatic and extensive policy measures, many of which involved hugely expensive public interventions into the private sector, only some of which have been paid back. Such measures threw the state’s centrality into sharp focus. Although major recessions have challenged state strength and capacity, they have not called into question the role of the state as the primary agent of policy initiatives, nor its legitimate authority to respond to economic crises.

The current crisis is no exception: active policy responses have been deployed across the world, from China and Brazil to the USA; in Europe, states are paying a huge price to support their banks, while the European fiscal crisis has led to unprecedented austerity measures in many southern and western European countries, which are under intense pressure from other states and from market actors. The current crisis has incited the rapid development of myriad state interventions, both internally and in relation to other states. The 2013 SASE Annual Meeting seeks to document and explain how states act in the face of crises, as well as the comparative consequences of those actions and the implications for the restructuring of the relations between states and markets. Such accounts may investigate the role of material interests, the competence of state institutions (such as central banks), the inadequacy or effectiveness of state regulatory institutions, and the effect of long term global shifts in power and resources from the West to the East.

But there are also more fundamental changes occurring within states. Research in classical political economics by scholars such as W. Streeck, P. Hall, B. Jessop, R. Boyer and M. Mann has pointed out the profound restructuring states have undergone as a result of globalization, changing societies, and other phenomena such as the worsening of long-term fiscal crises or implementation failures. Some aspects of the state are growing (auditing, penalizing), while others are in retreat. Some scholars talk about a new phase of the Weberian state; others point to the emergence of neoliberal governmentality. SASE 2013 also seeks to contribute to this ongoing debate over the definition of the state and its role, as contributing to the construction of more market-oriented societies, or to the contrary, resisting and protecting against market pressures.

The Institutional Foundations of Capitalism
Northwestern University and the University of Chicago
July 10-12, 2014

Call for papers

What makes a market economy possible? Through multiple crises and recoveries, capitalism has proven to be an extraordinarily dynamic, durable and adaptive economic system. Market-allocation of goods and services has spread globally, encompassing developed and emerging economies alike, and subjecting the life-chances of billions of people to the logic of capitalism. Scholars recognize that this is not a monolithic economic system, for it is fraught with internal tensions and marked by complex heterogeneity. And yet, all this economic activity rests upon a set of core institutional foundations.

Some preconditions have long been recognized. Adam Smith noted that markets required property rights, a set of legally enforceable rules that governed claims and control over valuable assets. And unless these property rights are also alienable, market exchange is not possible. Early modern rulers promulgated standardized weights and measures as a way to create accurate market information and facilitate exchange. Sovereigns have long minted coins and regulated paper money to help monetize economic transactions. Max Weber underscored the importance of “rational capital accounting” and “calculable law,” backed by the coercive power of the state, for a capitalist economy. Governments even institutionalize economic failure and enforce hard budget constraints by creating a legal apparatus for corporate and individual bankruptcy. One key issue therefore concerns the linkage between political and economic structures, and whether representative democracies have a particular affinity with market economies.

Neither functional necessity nor performativity ensures the automatic satisfaction of these preconditions. On the contrary, Karl Polanyi argued that unrestrainedly competitive markets tended to erode their own foundations, but that public policy could mitigate this problem through a strategy of decommodification. The reproduction of labor power, for example, was supported by policies that protected household earnings from market instabilities and which socialized the costs of creating an educated workforce. Groups and organizations that constitute “civil society” may also play a role in this connection, either by shaping public policy or helping to remedy the problem directly. And larger problems than those envisioned by Polanyi now loom as societies face the market externalities that produce global climate change.

The establishment, maintenance, and erosion of institutional foundations are contingent and conflicted processes that can move forward or backward, by design or accident, but always producing unintended consequences. Furthermore, establishment is a costly undertaking that requires dedicated resources (known sometimes as taxes). When these institutions malfunction, drama can ensue. Various regulatory and informational failures contributed to the financial crisis of 2008, and the ambiguities of intellectual property continue to generate conflict in the pharmaceutical and computer software industries, both nationally and internationally. The current failure of European labor markets to create adequate employment, especially among young adults, poses thorny political problems that will only grow.

Institutional foundations are traditionally located at the national level, but in the modern era they are increasingly pitched at regional or even global levels. The neo-liberal project of building markets now animates the European Union, WTO, and World Bank as much as it does nation states. Although the monetary base remains a largely national responsibility, the Eurozone shows that multi-national arrangements are possible. And the articulation and protection of intellectual property is now shared between national patent, trademark, and copyright laws and global agreements like TRIPS. Self-consciously theorized global models diffuse around the world, although implementation frequently reinserts significant local variability, and institutional convergence can be a remarkably inharmonious process.

Institutional foundations can also shift between public, quasi-public, and private spheres, with important implications for democratic accountability and control. Consider the central role that ISDA plays in the massive over-the-counter derivatives market by creating standardized contractual language for swaps agreements, the importance of private credit rating agencies like Moody’s and S&P in governing global capital flows, the part of the Basel Committee in setting international bank capital standards, or the role of ISO in setting a host of product and process standards. Private regulation abounds. They also vary in formalization, with laws and official treaties at one extreme, and informal social arrangements (such as underpin the New York City diamond market) at the other.

The 2014 SASE Annual Meeting seeks contributions that explore the different social and institutional bases of modern capitalism, and how these are variably established locally, nationally, regionally, and globally. Historical and/or comparative research designs are especially welcome, as are projects that deploy a range of quantitative and qualitative methodologies.

SASE 2014 Mini-Conference Themes
Call for Proposals

The Institutional Foundations of Capitalism

Mini-Conference Theme Proposal Deadline: September 9, 2013

As they have in the past years, thematic mini-conferences will form a key element of next year’s annual conference in Chicago, co-hosted by Northwestern University and the University of Chicago. Proposals are now welcome for mini-conference themes. Up to eight mini-conference themes will be selected for inclusion in the Call for Papers by the program committee, which may also propose themes of its own. Preference will be given to proposals linked to the overarching conference theme, “The Institutional Foundations of Capitalism,” but mini-conferences on other SASE-related themes will also be considered.

Proposals for mini-conference themes must be submitted electronically to the SASE Executive Director by September 9, 2013. All mini-conference proposals should include the name(s) and email addresses of the organizer(s), together with a brief description. As in previous years, each mini-conference will consist of 2 to 6 panels, which will be featured as a separate stream in the program. Each panel will have a discussant, meaning that selected participants must submit a completed paper in advance, by June 1, 2014. Submissions for panels will be open to all scholars on the basis of an extended abstract. If a paper proposal cannot be accommodated within a mini-conference, organizers will forward it to the most appropriate research network as a regular submission.

Consult the program for the SASE 2014 theme. Please see www.sase.org to look at mini-conference themes from previous years.

Proposals should be submitted to: Martha Zuber (mzuber@sase.org)

Democracy and Economic Crisis in Ibero-America
Mexico National Autonomous University, Mexico City
November 27-29, 2013

CALL FOR PAPERS

Recent studies and analyses have shown that economic growth in Latin America during the past decade has been accompanied by an improvement in income distribution and poverty reduction. The region has also gained ground in politics (toward democracy), and its governments have implemented strategies for (global) economic change. However, socio-economic deprivation in several categories and the persistence of social inequality, now more intense in large and intermediate cities, challenge structural economic change and democratic discourse itself.

It is essential to tackle these inequalities, which threaten not only the economy but the democracies themselves, by reprocessing social policy instruments. One challenge faced by democracy is the creation of social instruments to make the people participants and architects of their societies’ decisions; such a goal requires equal opportunities, fair income distribution, and strong and credible institutions.

Equal opportunities come with a strong state capable of developing a social policy – by investing in education, healthcare, and housing, and by developing a labor policy that ensures industrial relations with quality employment and large workforce participation. At the same time, these policies contribute to a more equitable income distribution and to an increased training and knowledge, which enables individuals to participate more actively in policy making, democracy, and governance.

Taking this as our starting point, what kind of state is needed for such a reconfiguration? What are the implications for democracy and social policy? What kind of state capacity requires an alternative development model? What is the potential and what are the limits to civil society’s role in ensuring democracy and correcting poverty and income distribution inequality?

CALL FOR PAPERS

En Iberoamérica los últimos estudios y análisis muestran que el crecimiento económico de la última década ha estado acompañado de una mejora de la distribución de renta y una reducción de la pobreza. Además, se ha ganado terreno en materia política (rumbo a la democracia), y se han aplicado estrategias para el cambio económico (hacia la globalidad). Empero las carencias socioeconómicas -en sus diferentes categorías y la persistencia de una desigualdad social concentradora ahora en grandes y medianas urbes-, cuestiona las transformaciones económicas estructurales y el discurso democrático mismo.

Es necesario enfrentar las desigualdades que amenazan no solo a la democracia sino a la economía misma, mediante la reelaboración de instrumentos de política social. El reto de la democracia implica generar instrumentos para que la sociedad se sienta partícipe y artífice de las decisiones y desafíos de la sociedad. Este requiere igualdad de oportunidad, distribución de la renta equitativa, instituciones fuertes y creíbles.

La igualdad de oportunidad se adquiere con un Estado fuerte que sea capaz de desarrollar política social, invertir en educación, sanidad, vivienda y desarrollar una política laboral que contribuya a la configuración de unas relaciones laborales que garantice empleo de calidad y renta a la población activa. Al mismo tiempo, estas son las políticas que contribuyen a generar una distribución de la renta más equitativa y, por otro lado, una mayor capacitación para que los individuos participen más activamente de las decisiones políticas fortaleciendo, también, la democracia y la gobernabilidad.

A partir de esto ¿Qué tipo de Estado se necesita para desplegar esta reelaboración? ¿Cuáles serán las implicaciones para la democracia y la política social? ¿Qué tipo de capacidad estatal requiere un modelo alternativo de desarrollo? ¿Cuál es el potencial y las limitaciones del papel de la sociedad civil para asegurar no sólo la democracia sino la reducción de la pobreza y la desigualdad?

Presidential Address and Awards Ceremony

This year's presidential address will be held in Aula Magna at via Festa del Perdono 7 from 5:45pm to 6:45pm on Friday, June 28th. The presidential address will be followed by an awards ceremony from 6:45pm to 7:15pm to celebrate the winners of this year's travel grants, student stipends, SER Prize, and EHESS/France-Japan Foundation prizes.

Gala Reception

The gala reception will be held in the honor courtyard (Cortile d’Onore) of the via Festa del Perdono 7 building at 7:15pm, just following the presidential address and awards ceremony.

Socio-Economic Review:
A Discussion of Publication Strategies, Topics, and New Developments with the Editors

Gregory Jackson, Chief Editor of the Socio-Economic Review, will speak on getting published in a peer-review journal in Aula 4 of via Conservatorio 7 from 2:15-3:45pm on Thursday, June 27th.

General Information for Participants

Computers and Wi-Fi

Wi-Fi is available at the Università degli Studi di Milano, but you will need to obtain your individual password at the registration desk.

*Please note: Rooms at the via Conservatorio site are equipped with both projectors and computers, though the rooms at the via Festa del Perdono site are not equipped with computers, so you must bring your own computer (Macintosh users should bring a standard VGA convertor) if you plan on using a PowerPoint presentation.
Directions

How to Find the Università degli Studi di Milano

By Taxi
Your taxi driver will recognize the university name (Università degli Studi di Milano) and the addresses via Festa del Perdono 7 & via Conservatorio 7. If your driver needs additional information, ask to be taken to the Piazza Missori and follow the directions below.

By Public Transportation
To find the university, go to any subway station. Inside the station, look for the color-coded map of the subway system. The Università degli Studi di Milano is located near the San Babila station on the Red Line, the Missori station on the Yellow Line, and the Duomo station on the Red and Yellow Lines. Milan subway website: (http://www.atm-mi.it/en/ViaggiaConNoi/Pages/SchemaReteMetro.aspx)

From the San Babila station (closer to via Conservatorio), head south on Corso Europa and continue straight onto Largo Bersaglieri. Take a left onto Piazza Fontana and then take a right onto via Largo. Turn left onto via Bergamini. Finally, turn right onto via Festa del Perdono and continue to number 7.

From the Missori station, head east on via Alberico Albricci toward via Paolo da Cannobio and continue straight onto Via Larga. Take a right to stay on via Larga and then take a left onto via Largo. Continue onto via Chiaravalle, then straight onto Largo Francesco Richini. Finally, turn left onto via Festa del Perdono and continue to number 7.

From the Duomo station, walk along the right edge of the piazza when facing the Duomo. Turn right onto via Palazzo Reale, situated halfway up the length of the Duomo. Take a left onto via Larga and then a right onto via Bergamini. Finally, turn right onto via Festa del Perdono and continue to number 7.

By Public Transportation from Linate Airport
Take bus number 73 to the city center and get off at Piazza San Babila, then follow the directions above from the San Babila station.
By Public Transportation from Malpensa Airport
Take the Malpensa Express train to the Cadorna FNM station or to the Centrale FS station. From the Cadorna FNM station, take the Red Line to the Duomo or Santa Babila station and then follow the directions from the Duomo or Santa Babila stations.

How to Go from One Building to the Other

Starting at Via Festa del Perdono
Take a right when leaving the building and then take another right onto Via Laghetto. Follow Via Laghetto and then take a left onto Via Francesco Sforza. Via Francesco Sforza will become Via Visconti di Modrone Uberto. Continue on Via Visconti di Modrone Uberto and turn right onto Via Pietro Mascagni. At the end of the block, turn right again onto Via Conservatorio.

Starting at Via Conservatorio

Meals, Hotels and Tourism
Conference participants are on their own for most meals. Coffee will be served between sessions in the Giardino of Via Conservatorio 7 (or the Loggiato Cortile interno in case of rain) and in the Cortile del 700 of Via Festa del Perdono 7.

The Università degli Studi di Milano is located in the city center of Milan, with restaurants everywhere you turn. Restaurant suggestions, as well as other tourism information may be found on the official Milan tourism site (http://www.turismo.milano.it) or the Visita Milano site (http://www.visitamilano.it).

Further information on the museums and gardens at the Università degli Studi di Milano itself can be found on the left-hand side of the university’s “About Us” page (http://www.unimi.it/ENG/university/29497.htm)

Hotels listed on the SASE website are located inside of Milan.

Stephen J. Frenkel & Chongxin Yu (The University of New South Wales, Australian School of Business): “Chinese Migrants’ Work Experience and City Identification: Challenging the Underclass”

Abstract

Are internal migrant workers who have contributed so much to contemporary Chinese economic growth forming a distinct, impoverished underclass (Chan, 2010; Solinger, 2006) or are they slowly merging into the Chinese working class? In this paper we draw on Marxian and Weberian class theory to develop the distinction between underclass and working class location including the economic especially labor market, political and social conditions and criteria that enable these social categories to be distinguished theoretically and empirically. Economic criteria include employment, unemployment and comparative level of income. Quality of labor relations is assessed by examining migrant worker contracts of employment, perceptions of management and experience of industrial disputes, and opportunities for career mobility, while political criteria refer to de facto citizenship rights, particularly social rights. Social criteria include embeddedness in city life indicated by relational ties and residential characteristics.

Drawing on a large range of survey data including our own analysis of a recent Chinese migrant worker survey of 3,758 migrant workers employed in 15 cities across six south eastern provinces, we examine aspects of work and city experience relating to class location in order to assess the underclass thesis. In addition, we evaluate the argument that younger migrant workers are significantly different in work orientation and strategies for work life improvement compared to their more experienced counterparts.

Based on evidence relating to the above-mentioned conditions and criteria, including an examination of migrant workers’ social attitudes and action, we conclude that migrant workers are joining the working class rather than forming an underclass. Survey evidence suggests moderate job satisfaction influenced by better treatment by management in recent years, particularly regarding pay and working conditions. Preferred strategies for improving working life reflect a consciousness of rights and a corresponding desire for law enforcement and collective action against recalcitrant employers, especially regarding discrimination against migrant workers. Improving workers’ capabilities is also prioritized. Being transitional, becoming a city person, is the dominant theme of our analysis of city identification, which shows that congenial social relations with both local relatives and residents, participation in recreational activity, and job satisfaction were among the more important factors influencing city identification.
SASE 2013 Elections

We are delighted to announce that Bruce Carruthers will serve as president of SASE.

The following people have been elected to a three-year term (2013-2016) on the Executive Council:

About SASE’s Home Base

The Center for the Sociology of Organizations (CSO) is SASE’s headquarters.

The CSO was founded in the early 1960’s by Michel Crozier, and pioneered the discipline of the sociology of organizations in France. Today it is part of Sciences Po and the CNRS. Erhard Friedberg directed it for many years, and its current director is Christine Musselin.

The CSO is a leading center of economic sociology in France, and its research covers the sociology of organizations, economic sociology, and public affairs. Scholars and PhD students participate in five major research programs at the CSO: Economic Governance, Higher Education, Risk, Health Politics, State and Territories.

With more than twenty senior full time researchers, thirty doctoral students and twenty affiliated research fellows, along with frequent guest scholars in residence (including a number of SASE members), the CSO is a lively international research community in the heart of Paris, and SASE is proud to be a part of it.

What is the impact of three decades of neoliberal narratives and policies on communities and individual lives? What are the sources of social resilience?

This book offers a sweeping assessment of the effects of neoliberalism, the dominant feature of our times. It analyzes the ideology in unusually wide-ranging terms as a movement that not only opened markets but also introduced new logics into social life, integrating macro-level analyses of the ways in which neoliberal narratives made their way into international policy regimes with micro-level analyses of the ways in which individuals responded to the challenges of the neoliberal era. The book introduces the concept of social resilience and explores how communities, social groups, and nations sustain their well-being in the face of such challenges.

The product of ten years of collaboration among a distinguished group of scholars, it integrates institutional and cultural analysis in new ways to understand neoliberalism as a syncretic social process and to explore the sources of social resilience across communities in the developed and developing worlds.
Socio-Economic Review encourages work on the relationship between society, economy, institutions and markets.
